

Oily Cart is here for our audiences and artists. In particular, we are here for people who understand the world in a sensory way.

We understand this is a challenging time for lots of families we work with. We know they will be in lockdown for longer. We send our love and support.

Oily Cart's aim is to think about theatre differently. We want to take it to places it usually does not go. We have to be more creative to do that during coronavirus.

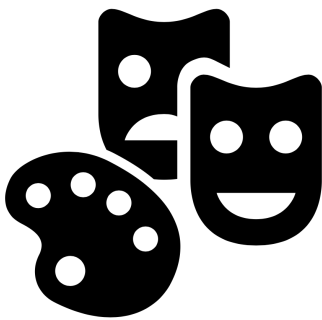

Our job is to make theatre that includes everyone. We will make a sensory film that you can watch online. We will tour theatre to streets and homes.

We want young people with disabilities to be heard. We will help make everyone listen.

Families can tell us what they need. We will give them what we have.

Everyone should have the chance to be creative, to connect with people, and to play during coronavirus.
